PLAYGROUND MARKINGS

Your school grounds are losing you enrolments.

Empty, grey playgrounds tell parents your school doesn't invest in children's development. Schools with vibrant, active play spaces attract more families and keep the ones they have.

Why it works

1 Tired kids focus better.

Active play during breaks improves concentration and reduces disruptive classroom behaviour.

2 First impressions drive enrolments.

Colourful, well-maintained grounds signal a school that invests in its learners. Parents notice.

3 Schools compete for pupils.

In a shrinking market, visible investment in child development differentiates your school.

4 Reduce playground conflict.

Structured games give children purposeful activity, reducing idle time and behavioural incidents.
